

Worker killed replacing cesspool in Shoreham, officials say

By Jean-Paul

jeanpaul.salamanca@newsday.com @JPaulSalamanca Updated

November 19, 2017 11:46 AM

PRINT SHARE

A worker was killed while installing a cesspool at a Shoreham house Saturday, Suffolk County police said.

Officers and fire officials said Kurt Peiscop Grau, 60, of Northport, died after becoming trapped underground in a pile of rubble.

Rocky Point Fire Chief Mike Yacubich said Peiscop Grau, along with a team of other workers, was installing the cesspool in the front of the house.

Suffolk officers and Brookhaven emergency crews responded to the scene on Josephine Boulevard at 11:30 a.m., fire officials said.

Yacubich declined to disclose the name of the cesspool company, directing those inquiries to Suffolk County police.

Multiple agencies including Suffolk County Crime Scene, Miller Place and Rocky Point fire departments and trench rescue teams from Brookhaven National Lab were at the scene.